Hello there!

Welcome to Siren Events, your local BC and Alberta micro wedding event planner and wedding service professional!

Micro and Intimate Wedding Events are a great way to relieve some of the stress (financial and emotional) of planning large scale events, creating a more intimate true-to-you celebration, and one with incredible creative flexibility.

If you're here, it's either because you've decided with your partner that you'd like to have a more intimate wedding celebration, you're curious what a micro wedding actually entails or who it might be for, OR you may want to have multiple wedding celebrations and start it off with a smaller wedding dinner or mini-ceremony before your big celebrations!

Let's dive into our micro wedding celebrations ...

to stay grounded in the wedding planning process might feel near impossible in the moment with all the fads, external expectations and pressures you start to feel. But we believe in keeping your celebration true-to-you, celebrating your love story, and starting your new chapter off in a way that is authentically you.

Remember your “why” of this whole day is to celebrate your love, it’s really as simple as that. Staying grounded in that truly does help lower your stress leading up to your wedding, and allows you to enjoy your day to the fullest! Sometimes that means a smaller wedding, or even a more creative celebration that doesn’t feel like the “norm”.

-LAUREN

Your wedding day should not be complicated...let me explain..

While there are so many positive and happy emotions and conversations when planning your wedding and getting married, there can be a lot of emotional and societal pressures felt during wedding planning that can sometimes leave you just wanting to drop it all and elope. From what you think your wedding should include or look like, what you think your family and friends expect to see and experience, and the potential thoughts and worries that you'll have regrets after the big day has passed.

The wedding industry while glorious and beyond helpful in how accessible information is, has almost built an environment of wedding content overstimulation. Paired along with FOMO and social media, the perfect storm has been created for potentially feeling like your wedding won't meet these invisible expectations or pressures around you.

But let's take a deep breath... and peel it all back a little bit.

Your wedding day is not that complicated, let me explain this.. Alongside all the excitement and fun of wedding planning and dreaming of your future life together, sometimes emotions can get high. There may be complicated family dynamics or pressures, potential financial stress or worry, or just pure decision fatigue. But at the end of the day , you are coming together (however big or small a wedding you want to have) and celebrating you and your partner. You're celebrating your love. It's that simple. And while the planning process is not always a simple or low-stress process, truly we believe at Siren Events the planning process should be grounded around the very simple reminder that you are gathering to celebrate your love.

But first...what even are micro wedding events?

Let's start it off at the beginning... What is a micro wedding? What do micro wedding events look like?

Micro weddings aren't limited to one specific number of people or one specific format. They are highly creative and flexible events because of the smaller scale of them. Typically the ones that we at Siren Events plan are under 25 guests in attendance, and they're typically shorter in time spent at one venue (most aren't up all night at the same venue, there is more flexibility for multiple venues within one day with a smaller group for ceremony, cocktail hour, reception, etc).

Examples of micro wedding celebrations:

- intimate ceremony with 12 of your closest inner circle, before heading to a large scale reception (either the same day, or potentially months in the future)
- A full micro wedding including ceremony, cocktail hour and reception in one venue location.
- A micro wedding weekend, where the closest to you come to celebrate across multiple days and multiple wedding events.
- A mini-mony (Miniature ceremony) for you and your closest family join in for an intimate ceremony and family photos, and then head to a local restaurant for your dinner.

So... who might a micro wedding celebration be for then?

Well, they're for everyone! Let's list out some scenarios....

- Those seeking creative venues or wedding locations (smaller guest lists allows more flexibility on venue locations, whether that's for your ceremony or dinner plans, or pre wedding celebrations.) You also can plan multiple events throughout a weekend across multiple locations.
- Those seeking a shorter time frame typically from engagement to marriage (especially if there is more week day flexibility on when you want to have your celebration, this could all be done in less than 6 months!)
- Those looking to renew vows or host an anniversary party
- A smaller guest list means being able to save or spend that extra money. That's good for those who...
 - might have a lower financial budget for a wedding right now, or no desire to spend a large amount on a wedding.
 - Those who want to get married now, and host a party down the road.
 - want an intimate experience with their inner circle, and want to go all out on spoiling those who have played big roles in their relationship! (with under 25 guests it makes more financial sense to be able to spend $12 per chair on those specialty chair rentals.)
- Those who might (or might've) wanted to elope, but still have a celebration with those closest to them.
- Those who want an intimate family ceremony, but a huge after party with everyone (whether hours after the ceremony, or months after)
- Those who want to travel for their wedding, hello destination wedding!
